FRIDAY MARCH 1, 2019

UD in the News Feb. 22-March 1

University of Dayton President Eric Spina sat down with WHIO-TV to discuss UD's future and theologian Sandra Yocum discussed the bishops meeting in Rome about the sex abuse crisis with national outlets Newsy and The Epoch Times. The Chronicle of Higher Education featured a UD program in a story about colleges incorporating mental health checkups into the curriculum.

The blog ExecutiveBiz posted news of Lockheed Martin licensing UD technology for testing. The American Society of Engineering Education's daily newsletter, "First Bell," also picked up that news as well as a Dayton Daily News story in which Vision Lab Director Vijayan Asari discussed artificial intelligence.

Law professor Thaddeus Hoffmeister was a guest of southern California NPR affiliate KCRW-FM to discuss possible jury misconduct in the El Chapo case. He also talked to the Dayton Daily News about a new program in the Dayton suburb of Riverside where police could access security camera video from residents and businesses to help fight crime and was a guest of the Fox 45 morning show to recap former Donald Trump lawyer Michael Cohen's public testimony to Congress.

Also locally, Rodney Chatman, the University's executive director of public safety and chief of police, was a guest of "WHIO Reports" to discuss "How We Can Protect Ourselves from Porch Pirates, Home Break-Ins and More." ABC22/Fox45 interviewed Dave Salisbury, director of the Center for Cybersecurity and Data Intelligence, about scammers; Mathew Willenbrink in the School of Law about copyright law; and made Ben McCall, the executive director of the Hanley Sustainability Institute, the subject of its "Someone You Should Know" segment. The Dayton Daily News talked to marketing expert Riley Dugan about the future of Dayton malls.
